On December 27, 2020, President Trump signed the Coronavirus Response and Relief Supplemental Appropriations Act, 2021 (“CRRSAA”), Pub. L. 116-260, which provided $22.7 billion for the Higher Education Emergency Relief Fund (“HEERF”). Of this amount, over $680 million was made available for proprietary institutions of higher education to provide emergency financial aid grants to students.

Subsequently, President Biden signed the American Rescue Plan (“ARP”), Pub. L. 117-2, on March 11, 2021, providing an additional $39.6 billion in support to institutions of higher education to serve students and ensure learning continued during the COVID-19 pandemic. Of this amount, approximately $396 million was made available for proprietary institutions of

We ensure that institutions prioritize students with exceptional need, such as students who are first-time graduates with extraordinary financial circumstances, in awarding emergency financial aid. For the students who were eligible for federal student aid, LTI’s methodology uses the Federal Student Aid (“EFC”) index to determine the grant amount. This methodology provided emergency financial aid to eligible students with a lower EFC score.

Students who are not eligible for federal student aid, in order to be awarded an emergency financial aid grant from funding allocated to our institution from the CRRSAA or ARP. Students who are eligible for federal student aid, voluntarily completed a survey that provided LTI with information about their exceptional need. LTI’s methodology provides for a higher grant amount for students in conditions that resulted in significant financial impact due to the COVID-19 health
